VE/1

An ancient city of Etruria, about 12 mi northwest of Rome. One of the 12 cities of the Etruscan Confederacy and a formidable rival in early times of Rome. The two cities were frequently at war with each other during three and a half centuries, with Rome always victorious. To prevent depredations made by the Veientes, the Fabii, a Roman family with their followers,

396 BC

At the siege of Veii pay to the soldier was begun.

Probably during Samnite Wars, the army was reorganized. Army was broken up into Legions of about 4000 men - heavy armed soldiers divided into maniples. Each of these maniples could manoeuvre independently. Ea. maniple comprised two centuries. This no longer had numerical meaning, but was simply a military unit.
